TRADES' UNION CONVENTION.

SECOND MEETING.

The Convention met according to adjournment, on Tuesday evening, at the Old Common Council Room. The President being absent, WILLIAM R. STACY, was chosen Chairman pro tem. After reading the proceedings of the last meeting, the Committee which had been appointed to receive and examine the credentials of the Delegates, reported the names of William R. Stacy, from the Cabinet Makers, and William T. Spear and T. Smith, from the Boot and Shoe Makers, as legally entitled to seats in the Convention. The Committee appointed at the last meeting to prepare a Constitution, for the government of the Trades' Union of this city, reported the following (with the exception of one clause in the 12th Article) as the result of their deliberations:—

CONSTITUTION OF THE TRADES' UNION OF BOSTON AND VICINITY.

Preamble.—Whereas it is not only the right but the duty of every portion of the community, by all just and honorable means, to promote their own welfare and happiness. And whereas it is a lamentable truth that the producing class of society have hitherto disregarded their own best interests, by permitting the non-producing class to exercise a controlling power and influence, injurious to the happiness of the people.

Therefore, we, the mechanics and other productive laborers of Boston and vicinity, to obviate these evils and to promote our own welfare, have agreed to associate together under the name of the TRADES' UNION OF BOSTON AND VICINITY, and to be governed by the following Constitution:—

Art. 1. This Association shall be called, The General Trades Union of the City of Boston, and Vicinity.

Art. 2. The business of the Union shall be conducted by a Convention to consist of three delegates from each trade or art: to be elected by, and belong to, the body they represent. The delegates shall hold office for one year.

Art. 3. The officers of the convention shall consist of a President, two Vice Presidents, recording and corresponding Secretaries, a Treasurer, and a Finance Committee of seven to be elected by ballot.

Art. 4. The President shall preside at all meetings of the Convention, and preserve order therein, shall put all questions and announce the decision, and in case of an equality of votes, shall give the casting voice. He shall direct the labors of the corresponding Secretary, and call at the request of ten or more members, all special meetings of the Convention, and do all other things which may be right appertaining to his office.

Art. 5. The Vice Presidents shall officiate in the absence of the President according to priority of election.

Art. 6. It shall be the duty of the recording Secretary, to keep correct minutes of all meetings of the Convention, and to read the same at each successive meeting. He shall sign the notice for all meetings of the Convention.

Art. 7. The corresponding Secretary, shall by the direction of the Convention or the President, conduct all the correspondence of the Union, and keep a correct copy of the same. He shall also assist the recording Secretary at meetings of the Convention.

Art. 8. The Treasurer shall receive all monies, from the Finance Committee, and pay all drafts approved and passed by them. He shall keep a correct account of all expenditures, and of the funds on hand; and when they amount to one hundred dollars, he shall report to said committee, and hold the same subject to their order. He shall report at every regular meeting of the Convention.

Art. 9. The Finance Committee shall meet monthly, and shall receive the dues of members from the delegates and pay the same over to the Treasurer, taking his receipt therefor.

When the funds amount to one hundred dollars, they shall deposit the same according to the direction of the Convention. The Committee shall give an order on the Treasurer for all the necessary expenses of the Convention. The Committee shall also receive all bonds on documents, and all other property committed to their care. The committee shall keep true minutes of their proceedings, and submit the same to the Convention at each regular meeting.

No two members of the Finance Committee shall be chosen from the same delegation.

It shall be the duty of the two senior members of the Finance Committee to audit all accounts, and the two junior members shall constitute a Visiting Committee to visit distressed members, and report to the President, who shall, in conjunction with the Visiting Committee, order relief according to the nature of the case, not exceeding twenty dollars. In such case the President and Visiting Committee shall sign the order on the Treasurer for the amount drawn.

Art. 10. Each delegation shall make out, from time to time, as occasion may require, a correct list of names of all the members of the Union, in their respective trades or arts, and report the same to the Convention. They shall also receive the monthly dues from their body, and deliver the same to the Finance Committee at their monthly meetings, taking their receipt therefor.

Art. 11. The funds shall consist of voluntary donations and assessments. The members of each body belonging to the Union, shall, through their delegates, pay the sum of ten cents monthly, into the funds of the Convention.

Art. 12. The funds of the Convention shall be appropriated to defray all expenses, to maintain the present scale of prices to all members who are fairly remunerated; to raise up all such as are oppressed, to alleviate the distresses of all such as are suffering for want of employment; to advance the intellectual improvement of manual laborers, and to sustain the honor and interest of the Union.

Art. 13. Each trade or art may represent their grievances through their delegates to the Convention, which shall take cognizance of the same, and decide thereon.

Art. 14. No trade or art shall strike for higher wages than they at present receive, without the sanction of the Convention.

Art. 15. The Convention shall have power to call a meeting of all the members of the Union, whenever they shall deem it expedient.

Art. 16. The regular meetings of the Convention shall be held quarterly.

Art. 17. The members of any trade or art may join the Union at any time, by organizing themselves and sending delegates, and conforming to the rules and regulations agreed to by the Convention.

Art. 18. Any number of practical mechanics, or practical farmers, may unite together, where there are but few of each profession, and send delegates to the Convention as other bodies.

Art. 19. Associations of females engaged in any manufacture, may appoint male delegates to this Convention, who may be present at the meetings, and allowed to take such part in its proceedings as the Convention shall consider proper; and it shall be the duty of the Convention to encourage and assist such females, in any attempt to organize, and in sustaining their rights.

Art. 20. This Constitution may be altered or amended by a vote of two thirds of the members present; such amendments or alterations shall be proposed at any regular meeting, and acted on at the next. The 11th article may be altered in case of a strike at any regular or special meeting, two thirds of the members present voting in the affirmative.

On motion, it was Voted, That the several articles be read by the Chairman, and acted upon separately by the Convention.

Mr Morgan moved to insert the following amendment to article 3d.

"No delegate shall be entitled to a seat in the convention unless he shall have fulfilled his engagements with his employer while an apprentice."

The amendment was supported by Mr Morgan, and opposed by Messrs Douglass and Luther, and was lost by a large majority.

Mr Harris moved the following amendment to article 12th, viz:—"To advance the intellectual improvement of manual laborers." The motion was sustained by Messrs Harris, Douglas and Luther, and unanimously adopted.

The Constitution was then adopted unanimously, as the rule of government for the Trades' Union of this city.

Mr Luther offered the following Resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That the several bodies of Mechanics represented in this Convention, be authorized to elect three delegates to attend a convention to be held on the 9th day of April next, to choose officers, and to transact such other business as may legally come before them, and that an invitation be extended to all other trades not represented.

Resolved, That the several bodies of Mechanics so organized, be requested to send by their delegates, a list of the names of those composing their society who have signed the Constitution.

Mr Andrew Wright, a delegate from the Printers, having very generously offered to print, without compensation, a thousand copies of the Constitution of the Trades Union, it was thereupon

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be presented to Mr Wright, for his kind and liberal offer.

On motion of Mr Douglass, it was Voted, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretaries, and published in all papers which will give them a gratuitous insertion.

Voted That the Convention now adjourn, sine die.

Trades' Union.—The Constitution of the Trades' Union will be found on our First Page.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.

LXXXV.

Washington, March 10th, 1834.—This has been a day of uncommon interest in both Houses. Mr Pinckney of South Carolina made a florid philippic against the President, in the Lower House; while the Upper House was engaged with the proceedings of the Massachusetts Legislature, manufactured from the raw materials sent not long since from Washington, and now ready for sale in the political market.

Mr Silsbee opened the ball, and exhibited the goods for the inspection of the Senate. They bore the brand of the "American System," with the autograph of H. Clay & Co. in sympathetic ink. Mr Silsbee introduced the subject with a brief speech, to show that property, generally, had fallen 20 per cent. in value in consequence of the measures of the government; but he omitted to tell us that the speculators had excellent chances to make fortunes, by purchasing at reduced prices. Where there are sellers, there must be buyers; property only changes hands, but loses none of its intrinsic value; and what one man loses in such exchanges, another gains. Nothing is annihilated. But we must not stop to argue the matter.

Mr Webster, in a very cool, temperate, collected, and dispassionate manner, followed his colleague by a "read" to the Senate. For once he did not pretend to be "wise above what was written;" and read his speech, as palpably to my vision, as ever Mr Hill read one. I do not mean to imply any reproach by this—far from it; I am glad to see the Honorable Senator's caution and prudence; and his intention of not trusting to the inspiration of impulse and feeling on a subject, that should have nothing brought to it but calm reflection. He must have read lately the "Fable of the Sun and Wind," that laid a bet about pulling a man's hat off first. The Wind had the first "goings in," as the cricket players say; and blew a diabolical gust (very much like Mr Clay's Resolutions) upon the poor traveller; but he only buttoned his coat tighter around him. The Sun then had the "floor," and exerted his oratory (something after the manner of Mr Grundy, or Mr Wright,) upon the way-farer; he shone out with a lambent smile of sincerity and truth, and the traveller soon began to unbutton his tunic, throw back the "collar," slipped off, first one sleeve, then the other, and at length carried his coat under his arm. Reflection will always get the better of passion; and reason always win the day from prejudice.

It requires no prophet to foretell, that the opposition can never make any man doff his coat, or turn his coat, by the violent gusts of their base passions.

To return, Mr Webster proposed to be ready to support any project for "relief," i. e. a Bank, short of "absurdity." He professed to have been waiting all this time in expectation, that the Executive would have offered some project, or given distinct notice of some distinct intention, but as nothing had been offered, he gave notice that he should ask leave to introduce a Bill next Monday, for the purpose of re-chartering the Bank for some short, indefinite time, for the purpose of present relief, and with a view to prepare the way to have a Charter of a new Bank created, that should be just coming into the world, as the old Bank was departing for old Nick. In the mean time, he did not expect the principles of this Bill would be discussed, till the Resolutions of Mr Clay were disposed of.

Mr Forsyth answered him. He said he was ready to support a project for a new Bank, but on principles different from the old one.

First the rate of interest should be but 5 per cent.

Secondly, The States should have the right of taxing it.

Thirdly, The supervision and powers of the government direction should be put beyond question.

And lastly, (though I may not have embraced all his points,) proper provision should be made respecting the safety of the revenue.

These conditions I think embraced his sine qua non of any and all Bank projects.

In answer to the delay or neglect of the Executive, or rather the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr Forsyth, said that it could hardly have been expected of him, while his conduct had been constantly the theme of reproach that he should have offered any project, especially as he had not been applied to for this purpose; and that the Committees of the Senate had at all times been in the habit of applying to any of the Heads of Department for information, or projects on all subjects, and no facilities were ever refused or withheld. He further suggested to Mr Webster, that it was not necessary to give notice for leave to bring in a bill on this subject, that he could bring it in any time; and that it was hardly worth while to speculate another week—much less till Mr Clay's Resolutions were disposed of before he presented the Bill; inasmuch as three months had already been spent in this sort of speculation.

Mr Webster made a short, temperate reply; and Mr King of Georgia made a speech, in which he denounced the paper system and State Banks. He hazarded some opinions which most certainly are entirely apocryphal. His colleague non-concurred with him.

As the Bank subject is before our Legislature, it would be well for them to inquire of what particular advantage the Bank of the United States is to the six New England states when its whole yearly discounts amount only to $1,673,999.91? (if I mistake not.) More especially, one cannot see any great aid this institution has lent New England in her distress, when these discounts have been diminished from Aug. 1, to Feb. 1834, about 4 millions!

Let the Legislature inquire how it is, that in this time of "distress" at Boston, that the deposits in that Branch increased from Feb. 1, 1834, to March 1st, from $120,000 to $450,000? Does "distress" puff up the Bank, as "grief" did Falstaff?

These are grave inquiries for our Legislature.

Were the average deposits of the Branch at Boston any time within the last year, ending in February, more than $150,000?

I make these inquiries understandingly, and I hope they will be answered categorically.

REIS EFFENDI.

A letter from Concord, dated on Thursday, contains the following:—

"Returns from a good portion of our State give us about the same majority in the House as last year. Our legislature will be up to the hilt anti-Bank, and will always give the President a good support. In No. 6, Mr Tilton is probably elected over Lovell. Barton is elected in No. 4."

MUNICIPAL COURT.

[Friday.]

A Penitential sweat.—Mrs Sarah Seeley, who kept the house, on the hill, into which the daughter of Mr Perkins was decoyed, was convicted of keeping a house of ill-fame. The Judge, in announcing the verdict to her, stated, that, as it was her second conviction, he felt it his duty to be very severe, and accordingly sentenced her to two years hard labor, in the house of correction. She is a bloated, brazen faced being, and stands sadly in need of a good wetting down.

Paradise escaped from Purgatory.—John Paradise, a Canadian, recently from Quebec, was arraigned for stealing certain shirts, &c. from a house in Broad street, on the 4th of March. Paradise stated to the court that he could not speak English well enough to understand what was going on; but his modest disclaimer, of a knowledge of our vernacular was couched in more intelligible language, though tinged with the French accent, than is commonly used by the majority of our own citizens. The bundle was found upon him, but he accounted for having it in his possession by saying that it was handed to him by a short man in the street, to keep for his tall comrade, who was in the fees. The story, though not very probable, was told with so much apparent candor and simplicity that the jury acquitted him.

Rescuing a Prisoner.—Alice Perkins was arraigned for an assault on George Reid constable, while attempting to arrest one John Torpay, by which said Torpay was rescued and made his escape.—Reid was searching Torpay, in Mr Ruggles' store in Broad street, for a wallet stolen from a Mr Rogers, when Mrs Perkins came in with a swarm of "varmint," and bothered round Reid, catching hold of his arms, and biting his knuckles, until she compelled him to slacken his grip on Torpay, who evacuated instantly.—Mr Rogers followed Torpay up a flight of steps towards Fort Hill; Torpay wheeled round, seized a bucket of water, and doused it on his pursuers; and at the head of the steps he squarred off, and struck Mr Rogers a severe blow, which compelled him to give up the chase.—After being out about an hour the jury returned that they could not agree.

Patrick Glinchay, was convicted of a violent and indecent assault on several females in Green street. Patrick had no "recollection of the circumstance, but was sure he never lifted hand til a woman."

Cutting Cards.—Our worthy cousin of the Transcript cuts up Mrs. BLAKE's Benefit Card, "in the kindest manner;" but what in the deuce set him speiring about people's "age"? Has he been enjoying a tete-a-tete with some old chattering nurse? Fie, fie, thou ungallant bachelior. Can't find no lofter theme upon which to employ thy grandiloquent genius, and critical acumen? If not, set thee down and indite an approved stereotype theatrical card, for the "benefit" of the stage, in general, that none may hereafter offend thy fastidious taste and infallible judgment in this mighty matter.

To be serious, we never knew the Transcript to be guilty of a more uncourteous and unaccountable paragraph, setting aside the unrighteous hint to filial disobedience contained in it.

Stocks.—Not Bank stock, but Neck Socks, as manufactured by Mr S. G. B. Eaton, at 429 Washington street, will be found excellent articles to make a man hold his head up in these drooping times; they are as easy and elastic as a Usurer's conscience, and those who would clothe their wind-pipes in a becoming and comfortable manner, had better slip their necks into one of them.

B. Hammatt Norton, Esq. has commenced the publication of a new daily paper called the Boston News—issued at 12 o'clock M. on a sheet of paper twice as large as your hand.

From Tampico.—Intelligence is received from this place to the 20th of February, but it is not of an important character. The government of Mexico is making exertions to rid itself of the revolutionists, and has proposed to them to go and colonize Texas. The rebel Canallizo is stigmatized as an assassin, and his retreat from before the government forces, is said to be marked by every species of rapine and crime.

From Mexico.—The ship Henry Thompson has arrived at New Orleans from Vera Cruz, bringing files of Mexican papers to the 5th of February. The following items are contained in the Bee of the 26th:—

By a decree of the Legislature of Vera Cruz, dated 29th Jan. letters of naturalization are to be granted to all strangers who shall have the following requisites:—1st, six years residence in that state, and the exercise of some useful trade or profession; 2d, the claimant shall be wedded to a Mexican, or to a native of the country born of foreign parents—3d, the rendition of valuable service to the Republic.

Letters received at Quebec on the 3d inst. mentions the loss, with all hands on board, of the ship Henry Brougham, for Ross, in Ireland, from that place.

Shocking Casualty.—A little boy three years old, the son of Mrs Andrews, who lives at 57 beach street, was burned to death in the most shocking manner yesterday morning.—He was put in charge of an elder brother during the mother's absence, and while the brother had gone to the pump to get water, the child incautiously approached too near the fire, its clothes caught, and when some persons attracted by his cries for aid, went to his assistance, it was beyond human power to save his life. He expired in the most dreadful torment a few minutes after the occurrence of the accident.—Standard.

Atrocious murder.—An Indian was found on Sunday morning last, about half a mile below Rodney, murdered in the most shocking manner. He was lying in the middle of the road leading to Natchez, with the left side of his head entirely mashed in; a stout billet of wood lay near, stained with blood, and no doubt the instrument with which the deed was perpetrated. The murder is supposed to have been committed by one of his tribe.—Southern Telegraph.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Editor.—There is at this time a great demand for money; and the supply being partly cut off, and partly held back, has been the occasion of some excitement, some pecuniary distress, and much political clamor. I propose briefly to explain the cause of the demand, and of the supply being withdrawn, and the probable result. And here, I may observe, that it is manifest that the removal of the U. S. Deposits from the U. S. Bank to local Banks, could not have created any demand for money, nor have affected unfavorably the supply; because the money was still used for the same purposes as before; that of paying the U. S. debts; and it was perfectly immaterial whether A or B paid out this money, or loaned it, if it was not wanted by the Government. I apprehend, that if the receipts of the public revenue had not been changed, the demand would have been as great as it is at present; and the supply would have been totally withdrawn, and where we have had one failure, we should have had at least ten, and probably a total prostration of business. It is well known, that as soon as it was ascertained, that General Jackson was unfriendly to the renewal of the U. S. Bank charter, that institution threw itself, with all its power and means of influence, into the political arena, to prevent his re-election, and to aid his opponent. It did all in its power to corrupt the press, which, by some, is considered the palladium of our liberties. But it failed in its attempt to make a President, because, although the Bank could buy newspaper presses, could bribe editors and political leaders, it could not bribe a majority of the legal voters.

It then intended to use its great means to create so much distress, as to compel all interests and all classes to cry out for a renewal of its charter, as the only means of relief.—Government were aware of this determination, and resolved that the public money should not be used for the nefarious purpose of creating public distress. With this daily income, the U. S. Bank could shut up every local Bank in the U. S. in one week. But this supply being thrown into the hands of the local Banks, left them in a degree, free from the power of the U. S. Bank; and that Bank undertaking to hoard all the specie in the country, deprived itself of the means of doing much more mischief, and a foreign supply arriving, enabled the local Banks to afford great aid to the suffering community. The U. S. Bank, acting upon the plans of wily politicians, and coming upon the community wholly unprepared for the operation, produced a good deal of real distress, and much more clamor than was necessary. And this alarm was kept up by political excitement and political speeches, all intended to produce this effect, and calculated to act and re-act upon each other.

It is perhaps not generally known, that the Tariff of 1828 was intended to defeat Jackson's election. It was calculated, if he signed the act, he would lose the votes of the South; if he refused to sign it, he would lose the votes of the Middle States; and the loss of either of these, would defeat his election. But the Middle States took the bribe from his enemies, and gave him their votes. The South knew they had nothing to hope from the other party, and so voted for him as the probable least of evils; but, by the artifices of his and their enemies, their leaders were duped, and driven into such excesses, that Jackson was compelled to make a show of using force to prevent them from committing overt acts of treason. Let us now return to the subject of the great demand for money. Every one will recollect, that a few years since, owing to the almost total stagnation of foreign commerce, the great multiplicity of Banking Corporations, the supply of money, or its supposed representative, bank bills, greatly exceeded the demand. The holders, or issuers of this commodity, became extremely liberal in giving credits—every one could get as much as he wished, and every one was induced to extend his business, and a host of inexperienced persons, without skill or capital, rushed into the field of adventure and speculation. The trader extended his sales and credits, and adventured in speculation in our own market, and in every other market in the world. One became a merchant—built ships—and sent them forth with full cargoes, thereby casting his bread upon the waters, to see if it would return to him after many days. Another speculated in real estate, and soon ran that up to double its value. Another undertook to build railroads, and to wait for years for a return of his expenditures; and all kinds of stocks were substituted for the dice box, the billiard table, and the lottery office, as a field for gambling. A heavy bounty securing to manufacturers the supply of our own markets at their own prices, induced the investment of immense sums in this business, till they were making cotton goods enough in one year to supply the country three years—and here the great fish will devour the little ones. In other words, the longest purse will ruin all the others.

Thus every thing was set in motion—every one was fully employed—every thing was making rapid progress—and every thing depended on credit. The supply was so abundant, and so easily obtained, and every one was making money so fast on paper, that he launched out into a liberal style of living, purchased or hired a good house, furnished it handsomely, paid high rents for stores, used his credit to its utmost extent, and entered into obligations without rational limit, and without any reflection. At length a day of reckoning arrived—payments were demanded—affairs were examined—and it was soon discovered, that many undeserved credits had been given—that many speculations had resulted in heavy losses—that expenses had been at an unreasonable rate—that upon the winding up of affairs, there must be many found wanting. The public, at least the sound part, were beginning to curtail, and to reduce debts by a gradual and safe operation; as these debts were to be paid, every one was looking after the means; and this brought every class of debtors into the market together. In the midst of this universal demand, the U. S. Bank withdrew its funds with all possible haste. This increased the alarm, the demand, and the excitement. To alarm the public still more, a political cry was raised of scarcity of money, of alarm, and of anticipated distress; and this alarm itself would have been sufficient to create all the distress, and in fact, has been the chief cause of all the actual distress arising from a scarcity of money.

There is another kind of distress, that did not depend upon the money market, but upon lenders having any common sense; and that must have arisen at any rate. A great many persons, who, from engaging in ruinous speculations, were wholly bankrupt, as soon as their credit was doubted, or the situation of their affairs known or suspected, must have failed at any rate; and in their fall, they must have brought down some, otherwise solvent; and this is generally the class that have failed. The sound part of the community have been distressed, and scrutinized, and have had to make sacrifices, and pay advanced rates of interest; but they will eventually go forward, and be saved.

But the commercial world must be riddled of its chaff—men worth five or ten thousand dollars will not have a chance to fail for $200,000. The public will be disabused on the subject of the conduct of the U. S. Bank, and the ambitious politicians. There will be a tremendous re-action on this subject—and those who think they are making themselves vastly popular, by their speeches about public distress, and by calling upon Government for relief, from the doings of these very men, will meet with universal execration, and will cease to be troublesome, as they will soon fail of the ability to do mischief, because they will cease to be credited or regarded. Business will then revive, and be conducted on safe and successful principles. The U. S. Bank will cease from troubling—a dangerous institution will be deprived of its power to do mischief—other institutions will afford the necessary facilities for trade, and the general prosperity will resume its march—and the country will continue to grow in wealth, prosperity, and improvement.

CONGRESS.

Tuesday, March 11.—In the Senate, the principal part of the day was occupied by Executive business.

In the House, Mr J. Q. Adams attempted without effect, to procure the unanimous consent of the House to present the Massachusetts resolutions in relation to the deposits. Mr Clayton concluded his speech on Mr Mar-diss' resolutions. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, on the bill making appropriations for the army for the year 1834. Mr McKay moved to strike out, $31,772 dollars for the support of the army and support of officers; and to make separate provision for the pay of arrearages of 1833, (which were included in this sum;) he moved to insert for support, &c. for 1834, $1,286,986 and for the arrearages of 1833, $94,786. The amendment was agreed to. The appropriation of $59,179 for forage was agreed to and the bill was amended by inserting the sum of $1,825 as an extra allowance to Surgeon Beaumont for expenses incurred in making experiments upon the human stomach. The Committee then rose and the House adjourned.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

Friday, March 14.—In the Senate, bill reported in addition to an act defining the rights and duties of railroad corporations—to incorporate the Boston Bewick Company—the Boston Sugar Company—the Newton and Watertown Universalist Soc.—the Phillips Church Society in Boston.

Committee on Judiciary ordered to inquire into the expediency of abolishing the office of Attorney General, and to transfer the duties of said office to some other officers. Bill to establish Chelsea Free Bridge was taken up, and after some debate was decided in the affirmative by a vote of yeas 27, nays 5, and passed to be engrossed.

In the House—Messrs. Leonard, Thayer, and Fuller were appointed a committee to settle the accounts of expenses incurred in the reception of the President on his late visit to this State. Bills relating to a Board of Health in the town of Cambridge—to increase capital of the Railroad Bank—passed to be enacted. Bills reported, to incorporate the New Bedford Brass and Iron Foundry—to establish a Savings Bank in Wellfleet.—Adjourned.

Migration from South Carolina.—The Camden Journal of the 22d inst. says, "The rage for migration south-westerly, has, we think increased during the past year beyond all calculation. We daily see extensive caravans of movers, many of whom carry with them a considerable portion of the needful. In the course of one day last week, we observed nearly two hundred, the most of them from North Carolina and the upper part of this state."

Stage Robbery.—The Southern mail between Endenton and Elizabeth City, North Carolina, has been robbed of two trunks. From the number of similar robberies committed in that vicinity, it is supposed a gang of villains exist in that neighborhood, who are always in wait, watching every opportunity to plunder the stages of the passengers' baggage.

Opening of the Canals.—We are authorized to state the canals will be ready for navigation on the 17th of April next. It is the intention of the Canal Commissioners to have the repairs completed and the water let in, so that the whole extent of the canals shall be navigable on the morning of that day.—Albany Argus.

Ohio Canal.—The receipts on the Ohio and Miami Canals the last year, were about one hundred and eighty-seven thousand and thirty six dollars. This is a gain on the Ohio canal of 70 per cent. over the receipts of the previous year.

Accident.—George Wright, a slater, in the employ of David Tilton, fell through the scuttle of a building in Broad street, Thursday afternoon, distance about 25 feet, and was so badly injured that his recovery is considered doubtful.—Trans.

Re nominations.—The National Intelligencer informs us that on Tuesday the President re-nominated to the Senate the three persons lately rejected as Government Directors to the Bank of the United States.—Trans.

One hundred and thirty members of the Massachusetts Legislature have forwarded a memorial, approving the course of the President in relation to the Bank and the Deposit Question.

A Committee of the Board of Directors of the steamboat William Penn, have examined the facts connected with the late conflagration, and report that the fire was entirely accidental, and that no blame is attachable to Capt Jeffries, or those under his command.

IMMENSE MEETING!

The meeting of the PEOPLE last evening at the OLD CRADLE OF LIBERTY was as large as the size of the Hall would admit; not less than SIX THOUSAND individuals were present. For some time after the meeting was organized, its proceedings were disturbed by a large number of Bank men and boys; but they met with a NEW ORLEANS DEFEAT—were thrust out of the Hall, neck and heels, and quietness, thereby restored. A large number of gentlemen addressed the vast multitude assembled, whose remarks were received with the warmest manifestations of approbation, and the Resolutions, which were presented at the Temple by Mr JAMES, and published in the Post on Thursday, were adopted unanimously.

Among the gentlemen who addressed the meeting were Messrs. Chase, James, C. G. Greene, Thomas, Luther, Howard, O'Brien and Douglas. The whole proceedings were concluded by TWELVE CHEERS FOR THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT.
